

Orlando FSDO FAAS Team presents:

SPECIAL AIRWORTHINESS CONSIDERATIONS AND GOTCHAs

Who can perform an annual on an aircraft with a standard airworthiness certificate; can that same person sign-off a Light Sport Aircraft; what about an experimental? What about maintenance; can an A&P work on your experimental aircraft; may an IA perform an annual inspection as they would on an aircraft with a special airworthiness certificate?

Join us on our journey as we discuss the twists and turns of who can perform what maintenance on what types of aircraft and who can legally make the required sign offs. Our speaker will compare what is allowable on what type of aircraft, under what circumstances by what type of mechanic and or IA.

Unfortunately some mechanics have run into issues by doing the wrong thing on the wrong sort of aircraft. Certainly pilots are not immune to similar issues and have unwittingly let the wrong person sign off or maintain their aircraft or they themselves have or have not performed maintenance or logbook entries which perhaps may have been inappropriate.

This event is for MECHANICS and AIRMEN to get a clear picture as to who(m) can do what
